Self-Quarantine Diary – Final Edition

Perhaps “Stay-at-Home” diary is a better description. I tried to expand upon the idea found floating about on the internet. At the risk of it being a moot point in the waning days of May (an old boss of mine confused the phrase with “mute” point ... ahem), I offer this extension of my earlier posts.

Day 31 – now May 1, it’s also Les Smith’s drive-by birthday celebration in Mira Mesa. On my way, I used my Baofeng radio to broadcast the appropriate distress message – “May Day! May Day! May Day!”

Not only is Events Chair Steve Norris an efficient run leader, he also knows how to pick a shaded parking space in preparation for our special “Happy Birthday, Les” impromptu drive-by.

Photo Directory

By Dan Garcia

It is funny how things come about. I was sitting in my computer room one day contemplating submitting an article for the newsletter about, yes you guessed it, the directory feature of our mail service. You see, I was and still am rather bored with the "Stay-at-Home" orders we are all under. Then I received an email from Steve Norris asking if there could be a member's only directory added to the website. A directory with addresses and other such information. After going back and forth a few times we came up with a plan, and Steve submitted it to the board, and they all think it is a good idea. Wow, something to do! Thank you Steve.

A quote from Steve Norris:

With board approval, Dan [Garcia] has implemented my suggestion to allow members to publish their mailing (snail mail) address for other members to see. It will not be accessible to the public so you should feel comfortable about putting it out there.

The main reason I wanted to do this is so we can send each other Holiday cards. I still love that old holiday tradition and want to send cards to people I've become good friends with in this club.

This is completely optional.

Steve Norris

One of the features of our new email service provider is a directory that is accessible for members who choose to participate by creating and sharing a profile. It is not actually called a photo directory, but I prefer that name because pictures of ourselves can be added to the profile. Steve and I envision the photo directory as a means to further enhance communications with each other, to associate a face with a name and to allow those who get pleasure in sending greeting cards to do so. We truly hope that many of you choose to participate and share your profile in the photo directory. The directory is completely optional, only you can create your profile and choose to share it in the directory. This cannot be overridden by the owners of the service.

OK, enough of promoting the idea.

As alluded to in the preceding paragraphs, the directory is a feature of our email provider groups.io. This meant that the members only directory Steve asked for already existed, but not on our website. So, all that needed to be done was to provide a link to the directory within the site. And, of course, a tutorial on how to create your profile needed to be written.

The link to the photo directory can be found in the "For Members" section of the website. There you will find the link along with another link for the tutorial. You can also get to the directory by signing -on your account via the link on the home page of the website. Navigate to the Directory button in the left side navigation bar. The Photo Directory is visible only to members who have created a profile and shared it to the group. This is a feature of groups.io, not the SDMC postmaster.

How to create your profile:

Go to <https://groups.io/g/SDMC-mail> and sign-in.

Click the "GROUP PROFILE" button.

Click the "EDIT GROUP PROFILE" button.

The top data entry is the Profile Photo. Please add a photo from your own device picture folder. There is a browser that will take you there. Remember this picture is so people can recognize you, so please choose one that shows your face.

Ignore the User Name field.

The Display name field should already be set when you first established your account.

Set the Profile Privacy to "Other members of your group".

The next section allows you to enter information about yourself. It is a mini word processor. Suggest:

- a. Cell numbers
- b. Miata year, color and Special Version
- c. Modifications to your Miata

You can enter your home address in the "LOCATION" field.

If you have a web site, then add it in the "WEBSITE" field.

Save your updates by clicking the blue "Update Group Profile" button.

Remember, if you do not create a profile, you will not be able to access the directory

American Graffiti Cruise 2020

Tonight was Ramona's "American Graffiti Cruise", which honored 2020 Grads of Ramona's High Schools. For over an hour, I stood outside, watching all the cool rides festooned in Bulldog regalia, American Flags, and lots of good old-fashioned American spirit by riders and spectators alike. Just what the doctor ordered!!!! And lo and behold, the last entry in the parade was SDMC! They saved the best for last. You guys looked and sounded great; as usual!!! Made me proud. Thanks for joining us in our little burg for a hot time in the ol' town tonight. (It doesn't take much up here). You guys are the best!

Cheers,

Phil Daoust
'96 RHD "Briata"

Photos by your author. Sixteen SDMC vehicles turned out to celebrate Les's birthday and entertain his Mira Mesa neighbors in the process.

Porsche pilot & SDMC member in good standing, Steve Kennison was overheard to say "I'm getting lift at any speed above 20 MPH. Silly rabbit, Miata is always the answer!"

Day 32 – call me crazy, but the “distance learning” and stay-at-home approaches should ease future teacher salary negotiations.

Day 33 – feeling crafty, I made a toilet papier-mache model of Mission San Antonio from photos I took on SDMC's pre-pandemic version of the Coastal Cruise. I used a month's supply of drier lint to weave the decorative Mexican-style blankets to scale.

Day 34 – sorted and organized our collection of fast food condiments in the fridge. Anyone know the atomic half-life of a catsup packet?

Day 35 – wondering out loud (a common behavior) if we'll be able to practice “social distancing” once we return en masse to the highways

Day 36 – on a hunch, I took an advance on my promised stimulus check to invest in cruise lines, airlines, and Sears stock.

Day 37 – re-decorating my home office to emulate CBS news anchor Anthony Mason's work-from-home library set and its artwork. I opted for more contemporary art classics, such as “dogs playing poker” and a striking velvet Elvis.

Day 38 - “going Hollywood,” I'm toying with the idea of buying a local DeLorean on Offer Up and the optional flux capacitor <https://www.oreillyauto.com/flux-500.html>

Day 39 - cause for celebration, our local Chinese food emporium finally reopens, but for take-out only. Conspicuously absent from the menu – Wuhan Noodles.

Day 40 – negotiated a trade on eBay – my treasured Dr. Anthony Fauci bobblehead (see Day 19) for just four pounds of assorted beef.

Day 41 – casinos still closed; my wife is now betting on which neighbor’s yard will be desecrated by the roving neighbor dog. I bark out Clint Eastwood’s movie line – “Get off my lawn.”

Day 42 – sort of a Twilight Zone moment, a Bakersfield service station sign beckoned me in for $1.99 per gallon gasoline. (No joke!) When attendant Kevin Harvick (NASCAR – #4) asked to check under the hood, I was even more impressed. (Psych!)

Day 43 – consoled homeschooling neighbor attempting to restore order in her “classroom” after one of her charges called in a bomb threat.

Day 44 – joined a picket line with neighborhood youngsters demanding an end to distance learning and the reopening of actual classrooms. And while you’re at it, have the cafeteria begin serving Salisbury steak and lima beans ... please.

Day 45 – drove to Nordstrom’s for designer face wear and a wardrobe that fits, DMV for an expired license renewal, then to the beach; all on bargain gasoline. Life is getting better.

Stimulus Package- Miata Style

Many of you may have seen the recent Wheel of Fortune segments that featured a new RF Miata as the grand prize. Even more ironic, the back-to-back shows were produced in a ... wait for it ... “Surf and Safari” theme. While I somehow missed both, esteemed member Wally Stevens (and Sandy, and Patti) not only saw the show (now a COVID-19 diversion favorite) but captured the image below. Thanks for sharing, Wally

Add This to Your Bucket List

Just to be clear ... we’re not talking take-out buckets of Colonel Sanders, here. The notion that “you need food to exist, and art to live” isn’t lost on me. (I wondered how you would make that segue’. – Ed.) I’ve always been fond of classic automobiles, especially those of the late 1920s and ‘30s. The elegance and excesses of the Art Deco movement combined with the craftsmanship and engineering invested in the finest motorcars from both sides of the Atlantic Ocean. Let’s not forget about the necessary income, wealth, or lucre and the exclusivity that it buys. Even crusty “barn finds” from that era are museum-worthy for the stories and significance they often bring to bear.

One such institution is the (Peter) Mullin Museum in Oxnard, California. While I’ve led and collaborated on runs to the Nethercutt Collection, joined multiple Les Smith-organized excursions (using mostly public transportation – sacre bleu!) to the Petersen in Los Angeles, and attempted to visit every automobile museum I can, “the Mullin” has eluded my inspection to date.

Like its sister museums across the landscape, the Mullin closed its doors to the public “out of an abundance of caution” and in reaction to the COVID-19 pandemic. Attempting to remain connected to its clientele and attract new customers, they began doing virtual tours of the museum and its wonderful collection of French motorcars. (Interested? Here’s how to join: Mullin Automotive Museum <info@mullinautomotivemuseum.com>)

Wondrous Bugattis, Delahayes, Talbots Lago, Voisons, even Citroens are artfully displayed and maintained within its walls. The stories of the people involved and the vehicles themselves are shared each Tuesday by docents who clearly love what they do. (Not unlike the collection of SDMC members that haunt the San Diego Auto Museum as volunteers.) Every broadcast I take in reminds me of our own departed member David “Woody” Woodhouse, who was steeped in the details and history of these vehicles. It could be said his second language was “Bugatti.”

Your author enjoyed this bespoke Bugatti at the Petersen last November. The Petersen has also been conducting virtual tours for its legion of fans

While I’m sharing this information as something of a public service (not court-ordered, if you must ask), I’m now committed to touring this facility as a “bucket list” item. Given its relative ease of access, it’s not a difficult box to check. I’m thinking an overnight SDMC tour might be in order when the climate is more appropriate. (Judging by Jackie Eder-Van Hook’s recent post, she might be first in line for that event. – Ed.)

Humor is Where You Find It

Most of us have had our fill of the COVID-19 pandemic and the restrictions stemming from our attempts to limit any further transmission. The airwaves saturate us with facts, data, and opinions, not necessarily in that order. Knock on wood (then re-sanitize your hands, please), I’m not aware of anyone in SDMC that has fallen victim to the feared strain of coronavirus. Not in the physical sense, anyway. Most of us have struggled with the proscribed isolation from other human beings and to varying degrees. Agreed?

From my perspective, our club has helped fill some of that social void. Daily posts to the club email list, telephone calls, and multiple impromptu runs have buoyed our spirits and met many of our social needs. A few of those emails welcomed new and returning club members. It was very gratifying to see some former members returning “home.” Consider this your virtual hug or hearty handshake. Perhaps this really is a good place to meet some of those needs.

Our virtual monthly meetings on the Zoom platform have felt surprisingly comfortable and went much better than I would have expected. By comparison, the three Zoom Surf 'N Safari meetings I've conducted to date have had more hiccups and my orchestration of them more ham-fisted. (Always with the food references, hot dog. - Ed.)

Humor has been a common thread in many of those communications, and with good reason. It releases endorphins that make us feel better; it makes us smile, exercising many more facial muscles than the alternative frown. Humor acknowledges the pain and difficulties we might be suffering but refuses to submit. It makes the mundane more interesting. Here's a recent example with two of my favorite subjects – cars and canines. I had spent more time in a line outside a grocery store (you know the drill) than I spent hunting down and dragging my conquests to the register and then back to my car.

At first glance, I thought a very blonde women was behind the wheel of a nearby SUV. Since it was running, I didn't want to stare. On second glance, I realized it was a poodle, with front paws actually on the steering wheel and sitting squarely in the driver's seat. Imagine my reaction, upon finding no one else was in the vehicle ... no other human, that is. Here's what I observed, only after Fifi and I locked our gazes:

Yes, the engine and A/C was running ... had I been quick enough with my camera, the poodle had both front paws on the steering wheel – at “10” and “2

“Out of An Abundance of Caution”

There are many bits of popular advice I could offer in closing, ranging from “Be well” to “keep the shiny side up.” Out of an abundance of literary caution (that rarely has any meaning for you – Ed.), I won't attempt to list even those that I've used in previous columns.

Instead, I'll leave you with this single, simplistic thought. “Keep smiling.” It's good for your physical and psychic well-being. Besides, and in the words of my departed father, “... it makes people wonder what you've been up to.”

Surf 'N Safari,

2020      June 2020

Surf 'N Safari Update

We can likely agree that 2020 has thus far been one of the most bizarre and generally disruptive years in decades. Your Surf 'N Safari core committee hopes this message finds you and those you love in good health above all else. Given the current social restrictions in place, we have met virtually the last three months to continue plotting San Diego Miata Club's hosting of our 5th regional Miata event, one we proudly advertise and conduct as a "party."

It is an opportunity for many in the Miata community to come together in an intimate setting, exchange hugs and handshakes, experience great drives, good food, even show off some dance moves when the music moves you. In the current climate, and what we expect to see less than five months from now, those activities would need to look quite different. In keeping with our proven designs and strong traditions, we've decided on an alternate approach.

With your indulgence and understanding, we are moving our Surf 'N Safari party to next October. We are confident the social and medical landscape in 2021 will be more conducive to the activities and experiences we want to provide our Miata friends and extended family. We apologize for any inconvenience this causes, and acknowledge everyone's current needs for socialization and stress relief. A prescription for top-down Miata motoring has been helpful for the latter.

Just as we initiate the registration refund (in full) process, we ask that you earmark those funds for next year's event ... same intimate resort venue, same entertainment value, same San Diego party atmosphere. As an additional courtesy, we'll cancel your lodging reservations directly with resort management. Be well, and keep the shiny side up! We look forward to seeing you at Surf 'N Safari - October, 2021!

Gene
